

I love the fact that XM has traffic and weather for my metro 24/7. The variety of programming is so much wider than I can get on local commercial radio. I have two XM's: one in my car, and one at my home and they are constantly on. Obviously, congress has nothing better to do than to bully a successful business that has followed the rules set forth by the FCC from day one. And since I am paying for it, what gives congress the right to tell me what I can and can't listen to. If the NAB had any clue as to what is really happening in the communities they supposedly serve, there would not be a problem. However, the almighty dollar speaks much louder than the people, so that is why we continue to deal with this sort of thing. Please disregard this ridiculous bill and get on with the things that are truly important, such as maybe protecting the people from terrorists, not bullying the evil radio Gods.

Yours very truly,

Tom Puckett
